Re: Advisory Opinion Request

Dear Mr. Norton:

This letter constitutes a request for an advisory opinion, pursuant to 11 C.F.R. § 112.1 (2004), on behalf of Ken Salazar, the Senator-elect from Colorado, and Salazar for Senate (the "Salazar Committee"), Mr. Salazar's principal campaign committee (collectively, "Requestors"). This advisory opinion request concerns the Salazar Committee's spending of contributions it raised during the 2004 election cycle under increased contribution limits pursuant to the "Millionaires' Amendment."

Factual Background

Mr. Salazar was the Democratic candidate for Senate from Colorado in the 2004 general election. His Republican opponent in that election was Peter Coors.

On October 23, 2004, Pete Coors for Senate, Inc. (the "Coors Committee"), Mr. Coors's principal campaign committee, filed with the Secretary of the Senate a 24-Hour Notice of Expenditure from Candidate's Personal Funds, on FEC Form 10, indicating that Mr. Coors had spent $1,051,000.00 in personal funds in connection with the general election. The Salazar Committee received a copy of this filing that evening.

As the provisions of the Millionaires' Amendment permit, on October 24, 2004 the Salazar Committee began raising funds from individuals under an increased contribution limit of $6,000. From that date through November 2, 2004 -- the date of the general election -- the Salazar Committee raised $1,308,533 in contributions. Of this amount, $564,046 was attributable to the portion of individual contributions raised pursuant to the Millionaires' Amendment that exceeded the normal $2,000 limit.

Between October 24, 2004 and the date of this letter, the Salazar Committee has paid $1,610,641 in campaign expenses in connection with the 2004 general election. Over $100,000 in 2004 campaign expenses are outstanding and are currently being processed for payment.

Legal Framework

The Millionaires' Amendment to the Federal Election Campaign Act (the "Act") permits a candidate running against a self-financing opponent to raise funds from individual donors under increased contribution limits in certain circumstances, and in some cases benefit from unlimited coordinated party spending. See 2 U.S.C. § 441a(i) (2004). Access to higher limits is determined by comparing the "opposition personal funds amount," which is a measure of the self-funding candidate's personal spending calculated according to a mathematical formula, with the "threshold amount," a number that differs from state to state. See 11 C.F.R. §§ 400.10, 400.40.

If the opposition personal funds amount exceeds twice the threshold amount, the non-self-funding candidate may raise funds from individual donors in amounts higher than the usual $2,000 per election limit. See 2 U.S.C. § 441a(i); 11 C.F.R. § 400.40. The amount of the new limit increases incrementally as the difference grows between the opposition personal funds amount and the threshold amount. See 11 C.F.R. § 400.40.

For purposes of the Millionaires' Amendment, the primary election and the general election are treated as two separate "election cycles." See 11 C.F.R. § 400.2. The comparisons are therefore calculated separately for each election, and if increased limits are triggered, the limits only apply for that particular election.

Each non-self-funding candidate that has access to increased limits must refund, within fifty days of the election, all "excess contributions" that are not spent in connection with that election. 11 C.F.R. § 400.51. For this purpose, an "excess contribution" is the amount of each contribution raised in an amount above the usual

$2,000 limit that is not otherwise spent "in connection with the election" to which it relates. See 11 C.F.R. §§ 400.6, 400.50.

Requestors seek this advisory opinion to confirm that the Salazar Committee has no "excess contributions," and need not refund any portion of contributions raised pursuant to the Millionaires' Amendment.

Legal Discussion

Using a last-in, first-out method of accounting, the Salazar Committee has determined that it has spent all of the funds it raised in excess of the $2,000 limit pursuant to the Millionaires' Amendment.¹ All of these funds were spent to pay obligations incurred as a result of the 2004 election, and none remain in the Salazar Committee's accounts. It therefore has no "excess contributions" remaining, and believes it need not refund any contributions raised pursuant to the Millionaires' Amendment. Requestors ask the Commission to confirm this understanding.

Requestors understand that the excess contribution provision is inapplicable here, as the Salazar Committee has spent all of the funds it raised pursuant to the Millionaires' Amendment and therefore has no excess contributions remaining in its accounts to spend on any future election. The provision is intended to prevent non-self-funding candidates from gaining an unfair advantage in future elections by using contributions raised under increased limits in future campaigns. The Commission confirmed this in its discussion of the provision in its Explanation and Justification of the Millionaires' Amendment regulations. Interim Final Rule: Increased Contribution and Coordinated Party Expenditure Limits for Candidates Opposing Self-Financed Candidates; 68 Fed. Reg. 3,970, 3,985 (Jan. 27, 2003). This concern is not present here.

Requestors therefore ask the Commission to confirm that the Salazar Committee has no "excess contributions" remaining, and need not refund any portion of contributions raised pursuant to the Millionaires' Amendment.
